Q: How to create an infinite iterator in Python? I have to find the inverse of the function. I tried this: `def inv(f): def g(x): return f(f(x)) return g` And this is the error message: `TypeError: 'NoneType' object is not callable` I think this is because the function `g` return `None` I have try this: `def inv(f): def g(x): return f(f(x)) return g()` But now is ok But why the second option return `None`?? And the first option has problems? A: If you want `g` to return a sequence of numbers, the function should be called with an integer argument `def inv(f): def g(x): return f(f(x)) return g(1)` The object `g` is an empty function here, so it can't have side-effects. If you need `g` to return `None` if the function `f` returns `None`, you should have a look at the reduce function: `def f(x): return x+1 def inv(f): return reduce(lambda x, y: f(y), f(x), None)` A: First you need to fix the error. `def inv(f): def g(x): return f(f(x)) return g(1)` In Python `None` is not callable; it doesn't return a value, it's
