Many thanks for taking the time to explain. I'm sure that you are right and I'm going to try it. I'm reasonably new to this, so you must forgive my ignorance. Thanks for the reply. A: I always use this code when import file from sdcard:

There are many ways to do this kind of thing, but this is the most simple way. A: Welcome to Stackoverflow, you can't do that, it's impossible you can't extract a zip on a FAT formatted sdcard. What you can do is to read first the file to a byte[], then extract each file to a temporary directory and move them when they complete to a final location.

These are the people to work with. It also works great, we did a lot of research with various tv tuners to figure out which one was best for us. The company that built it actually had many different models that we thought were very similar, so we just went with what we felt was best for us. Also, the driver support that we used with our tuner was from the same company. It seems pretty straightforward... :) dvdrip's checksum functions are very simple, those like to be simple. You'll find the Linux version of TMC if you search 'TMPlayer' in synaptic. 'S-video passthrough' is no problem, you just have to pass through the HDMI signal to your monitor. It may be possible to do this using v4l-dvb-usb/dvb-usb-af9015.ko and v4l-dvb-core/dvb-core-af9015.ko from the dvb-apps package. The tuner module should already be loaded. The V4L-DVB module (v4l-dvb-core) seems to handle the vast majority of commercial tuners, (or at least the ones I've tested so far) so I'm confident it'll work. 'Webbrowser' is a really simple and very fast browser. . I've heard of a graphics-based media player from Samsung, which I can't think of the name of at the moment. Might be the first thing I install on my OS-less new PC... Slacko and Puppy are quite similar in design, although Slacko is one of the fastest (in terms of response to mouse clicks) distro's I've used, and is much cleaner and tidier than Puppy. Many modern DVR's use MAC OS or one of the BSD flavors (FreeBSD, OpenBSD, NetBSD, etc) and these can usually be used on a Linux PC with little modification. So you might be able to use it like a DVR (with a set-top box). Diablo 2 is a 32-bit game; you'll have to use an emulator
